

MULTISTATE EMPLOYERS

Multistate employers have two reporting options. You may report newly hired employees to the state in which they are working or all new -hires and re-hires may be reported to one state. If one state is chosen, the Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services (DHSS) must be notified of your point of Contact.

Are there penalties for failure to report?

Alaska has chosen to focus on cooperation with employers and has reduced fines accordingly. An employer can be fined $10 for each instance of failure to report per employee and $100 per employee if a conspiracy to not report exists between the employer and the employee.

Is New Hire Reporting safeguarded?

Yes. Safeguards are in place to protect the security and access to this information.

What will be done with the new hire information?

The information provided through New Hire Reporting will help us locate parents, establish and enforce child support orders, and ensure that Alaskan children receive fair and equitable financial support. Over time, this will result in millions of tax dollars saved in state assistance costs.

Isn't this information available through department of labor quarterly reporting?

Yes it is. However the labor information has limited value because it takes several months for CSSD to receive it. New Hire Reporting data is critical, because it's current.

Will it be hard for employers to comply with the law?

No. CSSD is making reporting easier than ever with our web based reporting program. You can now report directly by accessing the myAlaska website.

Employer's Guide to New Hire Reporting

What is New Hire Reporting?

Alaska law requires employers to report the following information to all newly hired or rehired employees to the Child Support Services Division:

- name
- address
- social security number

When must reports be sent?

New Hire Reports must be sent to CSSD within 20 days of the date of hire or rehire.

Who must report?

Any employer who completes a W-2 for employee wages is required to report.

Who must be reported?

Any person, full time or part-time, who receives a W-4 and performs service for wages should be included in New Hire Reporting. An employee should be reported again if he is rehired, or if a new W-4 form has to be completed.

What must be reported on each new hire report?

New Hire Reporting should include these seven items found on the W-4 form:

- Employer Name
- Employer Address
- Employer Federal Tax Identification
- Employer Phone number
- Employee Name
- Employee Address
- Employee Social Security number
- Employee Date of Birth
- Employee Date of Hire/Rehire

Do I have to report Independent contractors?

No, the State of Alaska, CSSD doesn't require employers to report independent contractors as new hires. Independent contractors are considered self-employed and therefore not an employee subject to reporting. However, their earnings are still subject to a child support withholding order, same as any employee.

How do I report?

AK CSSD has a web based New Hire Reporting, through the MyAlaska Portal at <https://myAlaska.state.ak.us>
